

Year 6 Comprehension 10: The Boy Who Became an Avenger

Once upon a time, in a small town nestled between green hills and sparkling rivers, there lived a young boy named Sam. Sam was a bright and curious boy who loved to read stories about superheroes. Every night before bed, he would dream about being a hero and saving the world.

One evening, as Sam was getting ready for bed, he picked up his favorite book about the Avengers. The Avengers were a group of superheroes with amazing powers. Captain America, Iron Man, Thor, and Black Widow were some of Sam's favorites. He imagined what it would be like to join them on their adventures.

That night, as Sam drifted off to sleep, he found himself in a magical dream. The dream took him to a grand, shiny headquarters. It was a place with tall, gleaming walls and rooms full of high-tech gadgets. Sam walked in and saw some of his favorite superheroes standing in the lobby. They were talking and laughing, and when they saw Sam, their faces lit up with smiles.

"Welcome, Sam!" said Iron Man, whose suit sparkled with bright lights. "We've been waiting for you!"

Sam's eyes widened with excitement. "Me? But I'm just a kid!"

Captain America put a hand on Sam's shoulder. "Even the smallest hero can make a big difference. We could use someone brave and kind like you."

Sam couldn't believe his ears. "What can I do?"

Black Widow handed him a shiny badge. "This is your Avenger badge. It means you're part of our team now. Let's start with a mission!"

Sam followed the Avengers into a room filled with screens showing different parts of the world. Thor pointed to a big screen. "There's trouble in a faraway city. A giant robot is causing chaos. We need to stop it before it causes more damage."

Sam felt a mix of excitement and nervousness. "What should I do?"

Iron Man handed Sam a special suit that looked like a mix between a space suit and a superhero costume. "This suit will help you fly and protect you. Just think about where you want to go, and you'll be there!"

Sam put on the suit, and it fit perfectly. With a deep breath, he thought about the city where the giant robot was causing trouble. Suddenly, he felt a rush of wind, and he was flying high above the city!

As he looked down, he saw the giant robot stomping through the streets. People were running, and cars were scattered everywhere. Sam felt a sense of determination. He knew he had to help.

The Avengers arrived in their own flying vehicles. Captain America threw his shield at the robot, while Thor used his hammer to create a lightning storm. Iron Man fired his repulsor rays, but the robot was still standing tall. It seemed like nothing was working.

Sam knew he had to do something. He noticed that the robot's power source was glowing brightly in its chest. He remembered from his superhero books that robots often had weak spots. Sam thought hard and came up with a plan.

He flew close to the robot and saw a hatch on its side. With a quick move, Sam used his suit's tools to open the hatch and found a bunch of wires inside. He pulled out the wires one by one until the robot stopped moving and fell to the ground.

The people in the city cheered, and the Avengers were amazed. "You did it, Sam!" Black Widow exclaimed. "You saved the city!"

Sam felt proud and happy. The Avengers gathered around him and gave him high-fives. Captain America said, "You were brave and smart. We're lucky to have you on our team."

As the sun began to rise in Sam's dream world, it was time to say goodbye. The Avengers thanked him once again and told him he could visit anytime. Sam felt a little sad to leave but was excited to tell everyone about his adventure.

When Sam woke up the next morning, he smiled as he remembered his amazing dream. He still had the Avenger badge in his hand. Even though he knew it was just a dream, he felt braver and more confident.

From that day on, whenever Sam faced a challenge, he remembered his adventure with the Avengers. He knew that with a little courage and a kind heart, he could overcome any obstacle. And though he might not be a superhero in real life, he learned that everyone can be a hero in their own way.

And so, Sam's dreams were always filled with excitement, knowing that he had once been an Avenger, and that made him feel like the bravest boy in the world.
