

Year 6 Comprehension 13: The Girl Who Could Fly

Once upon a time, in a small, sunny village, there was a girl named Mia. Mia had shiny, brown hair and big, curious eyes. She loved to play outside and explore, but what she loved most of all was dreaming about flying. She often gazed up at the sky and imagined herself soaring among the clouds like a bird.

One night, as Mia lay in bed, she closed her eyes and drifted off to sleep. As she slept, something magical happened. Mia found herself in a world that was very different from her village. The sky was a brilliant shade of purple, and fluffy, pink clouds floated lazily all around her. Mia looked down and realized she was not standing on the ground. Instead, she was floating above it!

Mia wiggled her fingers and toes, feeling the soft breeze against her skin. It was so exciting to be flying! She felt light and free, like she could go anywhere she wanted. As she looked around, she saw colorful birds dancing in the sky and playful butterflies fluttering nearby. They seemed to be welcoming her to their world.

"Hello!" Mia called out to the birds and butterflies. "How do I fly like you?"

A bright, bluebird with feathers that sparkled in the light flew up to Mia. "Hello, Mia!" chirped the bluebird. "You can fly because this is a dream. In dreams, anything is possible! Just imagine where you want to go, and you will be able to fly there."

Mia was thrilled. She thought for a moment and then had a wonderful idea. "I want to visit the Golden Mountain!" she said with excitement.

With a whoosh, Mia zoomed through the sky, the wind rushing past her. The Golden Mountain was far away, but Mia's dream gave her the power to get there quickly. The mountain sparkled like it was covered in gold. As Mia flew closer, she saw that it had a shiny, golden waterfall cascading down its side.

When Mia landed gently on the mountain, she was greeted by a friendly group of mountain goats. They had soft, white fur and twinkling eyes. "Welcome to the Golden Mountain!" they said in unison. "We don't often have visitors from the sky. What brings you here?"

Mia smiled and said, "I just wanted to see what this magical place is like. It's even more beautiful than I imagined!"

The mountain goats showed Mia around, guiding her to a special garden with flowers that changed colors and giant, glowing mushrooms. Mia was amazed and delighted. She played with the mountain goats, danced around the garden, and even had a picnic with them.

As the sun began to set, the sky turned a deep shade of blue, and the stars started to twinkle. Mia knew it was time to go back to her village. She thanked the mountain goats and said goodbye.

With a wave of her hand, Mia soared back into the sky. She floated among the stars, feeling a sense of joy and wonder. She knew that her dream world was a special place where she could always return whenever she wanted.

Slowly, the sky began to fade, and Mia found herself back in her cozy bed. She opened her eyes and saw the morning sun shining through her window. She smiled, remembering her amazing adventure.

Even though she was back in her village, Mia felt different. She felt braver and happier, knowing that in her dreams, she could fly and explore wonderful places. And every night, when she closed her eyes, she looked forward to her next magical journey.

From that day on, Mia always looked up at the sky with a smile, knowing that her dreams had a special kind of magic. And she knew that with a little imagination, she could fly wherever her heart wanted to go.
